TWICE TOLD TALES

Pride and Prejudice

Jane Austen • 1813

A story in word puzzles

BOOK PROTOTYPE • 4 SCENES, CHAPTERS I–VI

Version: word list upside down • one word given • first letters

How to play

1. Read the scene. Each chapter is a moment from the book, told in a few lines. Some of its words are missing.
2. Find the missing words in the grid. Work them out from the scene: the lines tell you how many letters. If you're stuck, the list is printed upside down under the grid. Words run from letter to neighbouring letter, up, down, left or right, never diagonally, and they can bend into L, Z or square shapes.
3. Every letter belongs to exactly one word. Nothing is left over and words never cross, so when every letter is used, you have them all. Outline each word in pencil as you find it.
4. Write the words into the scene, then turn the page: the chapter's original illustration and the whole scene are waiting.

One word in each scene is already written in, and its letters are shaded on the grid, to get you started.

The first letter of every missing word is given.

For example

FIND: BOOK • PEN • STORY

S	T	O	R
O	O	K	Y
B	P	E	N

SOLVED

S	T	O	R
O	O	K	Y
B	P	E	N

Each chapter opens across two pages: the scene on the left, its grid on the right, so you can read and search without turning. When every word is found, turn the page for the chapter's illustration and the whole scene.

Stuck? Start with the longest word, or with a letter that appears only once. The answers are at the back.

Your notes

This is a first prototype of the book. A few words about how it felt help shape the real one.

1. Which chapter did you enjoy most, and why?

2. Did you get stuck anywhere? Where, and what helped?

3. How did outlining bent words in pencil feel?

4. Was turning the page to the picture a good moment?

5. Did filling in the scene help you remember the words?

The texts retell Jane Austen's Pride and Prejudice (1813). Illustrations: Hugh Thomson, 1894 (George Allen) and C. E. Brock, 1895 (Macmillan), both in the public domain.
