

TWICE TOLD TALES

Pride and Prejudice

Jane Austen · 1813

A story in word puzzles

PRINT PROTOTYPE · 4 SCENES, CHAPTERS I–VI

How to play

1. Read the scene. Each chapter is a moment from the book, told in a few lines. Some of its words are missing.
2. Find the missing words in the grid. Their list is above it. Words run from letter to neighbouring letter, up, down, left or right, never diagonally, and they can bend into L, Z or square shapes.
3. Every letter belongs to exactly one word. Nothing is left over and words never cross, so when every letter is used, you have them all. Outline each word in pencil as you find it.
4. Write the words into the scene, then turn the page: the chapter's original illustration and the whole scene are waiting.

Stuck? Start with the longest word, or with a letter that appears only once. The answers are at the back.

Printing: print double-sided (flip on the long edge), so each picture is on the back of its puzzle. Thicker paper keeps it from showing through.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennet

Hugh Thomson, 1894

Chapter I · A Single Man of Good Fortune

It is a truth universally acknowledged that a single man with a good FORTUNE must be in want of a WIFE. So when Netherfield Park is let at last to Mr. Bingley, a rich young GENTLEMAN, Mrs. Bennet can think of nothing but seeing one of her five DAUGHTERS MARRIED to him. Mr. Bennet only teases her, and she protests that he has no pity for her poor NERVES.

Your notes

This is a first paper prototype. A few words about how it felt help shape the real book.

1. Which chapter did you enjoy most, and why?

2. Did you get stuck anywhere? Where, and what helped?

3. How did outlining bent words in pencil feel?

4. Was turning the page to the picture a good moment?

5. Did filling in the scene help you remember the words?
